Precision Fitness Exhibiting at National Fitness Trade Show

Affordable Fitness Franchise Ideal for Personal Trainers Seeking Long Term Business Growth

WHAT	Precision Fitness, a fitness business model focused on affordable personal training, will be exhibiting at this year's National Fitness Trade Show, presented in association with the International Health, Racquet and Sportsclub Association (IHRSA) and the American Council on Exercise (ACE). Precision Fitness founder and fitness entrepreneur Mike Salerno will be on-hand to help visitors look at business benefits of owning a personal fitness franchise, designed especially for trainers and fitness enthusiasts to build and grow business beyond the limits of high-priced private training. Franchisees can take advantage of as much or as little of the training and certification offered, achieving fitness business success offering private training as low as $18 per session. Proven as a fitness business concept for more than 12 years, Precision Fitness represents the new wave in private training, eliminating inherent drawbacks to servicing an elite clientele. Trainers can be more profitable, achieve more results for more people and still offer the lowest per session rate – concepts that strongly support IHRSA's show theme of reaching new levels of success with fitness and fitness business. Visit Precision Fitness in Booth #607 to speak with its founder, answer your questions about franchise ownership and view a short but informative video about the company, its culture and its unique position in the fitness industry.
WHEN	September 9-11, 2008
